FROM ENGINEERING:

The rumor that engineering could not solve its own puzzle is just not true.

It was so obvious that we decided there was no need to print the answer. Since some two-year-old may not have been able to figure the answer, here it is-- The banana would have to be zero inches long so there was no banana!

Since the rope was the same length on each side of the fence and the weight of the weight was equal to the weight of the monkey, it becomes obvious that the monkey would slide to the ground if the monkey was holding a banana!!!

YOUR NEXT PUZZLE: Why are manhole covers circular instead of square?

NEW HELP ON THE HORIZON!

A long-planned strengthening of our sales team has been put into effect by the appointment of an assistant regional sales manager.

Jim Beattie, who comes to us from Anderson Hi Fi, has a B.S. degree in marketing from Ohio State. Jim worked for the Winthrop Laboratories for two years; he was their top regional sales manager.

Jim will spend a three-month training period learning how our organization operates. He is a Hi Fi nut, married, a Viet Nam veteran and great at ping-pong.

EGADS! BACK AGAIN

There is a saying that says, "absence makes the heart grow fonder." If this is correct, I sure wish I would have taken two weeks vacation instead of just one. The only thing my heart grew fonder of was staying home and vacationing!

From what I've heard, camping is definitely a growing endeavor here at Crown. Many of the employees took their families and headed for the woods. Despite the bears, wolves and the most common visitor, the mosquito, we found almost all our outdoor families back working the second week of vacation. (the woods is only good for one week, I guess.)

The main thing we have noticed after vacation is that we're back, safe and sound! A point that can't be taken too lightly in this day of accidents.

Speaking of accidents, I see the vacation crew did a great job on the ladies' restroom. Seems as though they forgot about the men's room. That comment that we heard about the men's room looking like the janitor's closet except the janitor's closet had more supplies was definitely out of order. The janitor's closet is too full of other items to tell if there are more supplies in there or not!

MURDOCK'S MUD

Vacation time has made the scene. So in the spirit of vacations, I thought I would just relax. However comma our Editor-in-Chief, Simon Lagree Bachman, said, "OH NO YOU AIN'T." (Bachman is not too bright.) So here I are.

Many of you can see with your very own eyes that marvelous and glorious things have taken place while you were gone. The new offices are nearly completed except for one slow worker who keeps drinking the wood stain. After drinking the wood stain, he insists

A FRESHMAN'S DAY
by Stanley Swinger

The life of a student isn't that of leisure. A student has to work hard to keep up on all of the work that is given for the student to do. I carried sixteen hours, but a lot of that was music.

My day would start around 7:00. At this time I would go over to eat breakfast. The food at Bethel is unique. They have a way to warm up eggs from last week and serve them a week later. Once in a while you might get a fresh egg but that was a rare occasion. After chocking down the eggs I would go and listen to the prof lecture for an hour on how Bach and Beethoven would write music and we were suppose to be able to do the things that they did with music. The prof made it sound so easy, but he knew what he was doing and we didn't and at that hour who can think about music and how to write it. At the end of the lecture he would always give assignments which we didn't quite know how to do and were told to do it with no questions asked.

For the next hour until chapel I would either go to the library or practice with the rest of the kids in our Gospel team. I always enjoyed this time. We would discuss what kind of music we would sing in the churches we would go to. Once in a while we got into heated disagreements but we always worked them out.

At 10:00 in the morning we, the student body, would head over to the gymm for Chapel. This is a time where we could listen to the Word of God. A person could forget all of his troubles. I enjoyed these times in Chapel. Some of them were rather dry, but in general they were of an excellent quality. Our Gospel team sang in Chapel several times. This is just one of the ways that I feel I could express myself and how I feel about God.

After Chapel I headed for English. We had another cut and dried lecture on some story or poem from our book. What some of these authors wrote about was good but the rest was very dull. At the end of the term I was glad for some of this dull stuff. I realized what the prof was trying to do and I was glad for this.

The biggest event of the day took place after English and that was waiting for the mail. All the guys in the dorm would go and wait for the mailman to bring the mail over to the dorm. It was kind of a contest to see who could get the most mail in the dorm. After that came another great meal from our great cafeteria.

My afternoon were the busiest. I would start out with an hour of choir. Choir was a lot of fun. We had our ups and downs but I always looked forward to choir. The choir traveled a lot and on our tour traveled to Washington, D.C. and sang in the National Cathedral. This to me was the highlight of the tour.

The rest of the afternoon and evening until about midnight was spent in either the practice room practicing music or in the library studying. Not all of the afternoon was taken for this though. I was out for baseball and the biggest share of the afternoon was taken for practise or games.

Our beloved editor said four paragraphs so this is the last one-- pause five second for appropriate reaction. In closing, let me say this, "Prosperity is something you can work for, fold, and give to the Internal Revenue."

KROWN KOMENTS or LAVETA'S LEVUTY

Sylvia Miller declared she was planning to get her revenge for having been in this column last time. She said she was not going to talk this month, even if it hurt her as much as it hurts us.

Sue Gates now has a twinkle on her hand that shines almost as much as the twinkle in her eyes. She and Leonard Ferguson plan to take off in marital orbit, September 11, 1971.

For those who remember Al Buchanan, this column was informed he has his D.D. degree. We were told this means Doctor of Divinity, but knowing our Al, it must mean Doctor of Devilment!

John Bachman insists that HE will be the boss in his home after August 14, 1971. We are willing to wait until October 14, 1971 to see if he is still insisting that he WILL be the boss.

Joan McBriar is the latest in the line of swan divers coming in the employees entranc. Unfortunately, the expanded metal is supposed to keep us from goitg swimming and skinned knees are the or-der of the day.

The old Wiring Department gathered June 19 at Laveta Randall's home for a carry-in supper. They had an interesting time discussing all the changes at Crown, meeting husbands; and seeing how much the children, last seen as babies, had grown. Included in the group were: the only masculine member of the department, Bill Myers; and the ladies were Zelma Morgan, Ann Brenneman, Eileen (Lange) Miller, and Mary (Mapes) Somerville. Absent were Pat Baldwin and Karol Harnen.

CROWN SAYS THANKS

We would like to take a minute to thank Dennis Badke and Dave Stuber for introducing us to four channel sound.

It was a real challenge for the fellas, having to set up a four channel system with lousey accoustic surroundings, short notice and plenty of "What are you doing's?"

But since they had such fine equipment and a good basic knowledge of the equipment, Crown employeed will be able to say they have heard four channel sound. If anyone asks you what it sounds like, please don't say jets, race cars, motorcycles and trains. Dennis and Dave have failed if you do!

ADDITIONAL KROWN KOMMENTS:

Steve Peer is thinking he got a real good deal! His wife told him if he shaved his beard he could buy an I C - 150. Steve, think about it--who really got the good deal. You've still got to "buy" the I C!!!!

Another member of the Crown team was given a "life sentence" beginning July 10 in the institution of marriage. Congratulations Tim and Linda Reynolds. Linda will be teaching in the Middlebury school system.

Dolores has a secret she is keeping from all of us. It's really got her up in the air.

Larry Dennison is telling everyone that electrons bite. It seems poor Larry forgot to turn off the juice when doing his wiring for the Xerox machine!

QUESTION: Are you the one with bad breath that everyone is talking about?
